A D. 3.

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method of phenotypically antibiotic-resistant preparing a of stationary phase bacteria by subpopulation treating stationary phase bacteria with high doses of antibacterial agents, the subpopulation thus process for identified, a identifying new antibacterial agents by testing against the antibiotic-resistant subpopulation, the compounds thus identified and their uses, particularly in bacterial infections involving dormant treating bacteria.